Legal action taken over Trump impeachment comments He was due to begin a week-long trip to Central America on Monday. The US President flew to El Salvador, Honduras and Guatemala, and will travel to Mexico from tomorrow. It is the second time Mr Trump has been accused of dragging the country into the political wrangling in Washington. The president has faced accusations of impeachable offences for his actions including abusing his office by demanding a foreign country investigate a political rival, and obstruction of Congress by allegedly refusing to cooperate with an impeachment inquiry. On Wednesday, he is expected to deliver a State of the Union address to the US Congress. "It is really a great honour for me to be going", Trump said as he left the White House. An impeachment inquiry into Mr Trump began in October, after a whistleblower accused him of asking Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky to open an investigation of Democratic presidential rival Joe Biden. Mueller wrote in a letter to Congress last month that his investigation into Trump and his associates has reached a "well-defined" conclusion. The DOJ then cited the judge's ruling in the judge's order halting the proceedings in the Mueller case, saying the Justice Department doesn't take guidance from the courts and that the department's position was that it did not need to comply with the subpoena. On Twitter, Trump said: "The '19th century,' not 'the political hacks,' are best to deal with our crooked, overzealous, and politically motivated Democrat opponents. We are fighting for our Country and our 2020 Election. Following reports in the media, the court declined to hear a challenge to Mueller's subpoena on Monday. Another order Trump signed in August, blocking current and former officials from testifying about the July

WASHINGTON (Reuters) - The U.S. Supreme Court on Monday agreed to decide whether a man charged with murder but spared execution because of his mental illness is entitled to a new trial or a reprieve.

FILE PHOTO: Bruce Ivins, the sole suspect in the 2001 anthrax attacks, attends a news conference about his case at U.S. District Court in Alexandria, Virginia May 2, 2012. REUTERS/Hyungwon Kang/File Photo The court's decision to agree to hear a challenge to the state of Maryland's death penalty is a rare procedural step. Bruce Ivins, who was charged with the 2001 anthrax attacks, died of suicide in 2008 while in federal prison. But U.S. District Court Judge Roger Titus in Baltimore overturned his death sentence and the U.S. government has appealed that ruling. "Mr. Ivins was on death row for nearly 16 years," said Nathaniel Giles, his lawyer. “It’s an extreme situation. He’s in prison.” Two other former federal prisoners were also charged with killing people with anthrax and sentenced to death. In 2006 the Supreme Court ruled that the death penalty could not be used against them because of flaws in how their sentences were carried out.

Prosecutors said Ivins, a microbiologist with the U.S. Army’s anthrax-research lab in Maryland, killed
