If you haven't checked out our list of best Photoshop alternatives, you might be interested in Learning Photoshop CC: 10 Photoshop alternatives. Photoshop is an essential tool for amateur and professional designers. Depending on your design and target audience, it's the right software for you to work with. It's powerful, but also overwhelming for beginners. Photoshop is difficult to pick up for novices because of its complexity and the fact that it is so popular. Luckily, it's also easy to get Photoshop for free. The entire software is available for users to download at the Creative Cloud website. The problem with this is that it comes with annoying monthly fees that are quite expensive. With these monthly payments, you get advanced features, such as grouped and layered editing, the retouching tools, and more. The alternative is to download the full version of Photoshop for free without fees and without signing up. It's not free for everyone who is technically capable of using the software. You must be a student, an independent designer, a graphic designer or a freelancer with a day job and free time to spare. If you're one of those rare souls who can afford to download Photoshop and own it on their computer, here's what you'll need in order to get started: The latest version of Photoshop A high-speed internet connection An extensive computer knowledge Some design basics Here's how to download and use Photoshop for free. Step 1: Visit photoshop.adobe.com You'll need to log into your Adobe ID. This isn't your regular email account but a special account created exclusively for Adobe Photoshop and other Adobe products. You'll also need to select where you'd like to download the software from the software's website. Click on the "Download" button. Step 2: Choose a file format A popular file type for images is the .psd file format. You can convert any files of this type into the .psd format using the Photoshop program. To do this, just select the image, go to Image → Save for Web & Devices, and choose the .psd format. You'll also have to make sure that the option "Automatically save web and optimize image" is disabled. Step 3: Download Photoshop Click on the "Free Download" button. The program will begin downloading and install, and then it will start installing itself. If you have an automatic update, you'll need to go adobe.com/updates

U.S. Stripe Operation Is Funded by Private Contributions, ProPublica found posted by Chuck Sado @ 9:45 pm (SAN FRANCISCO) - Private donations account for the majority of a U.S. government money-laundering operation, a new investigation by ProPublica and WNYC-NYC Public Radio has found. ProPublica and WNYC reported Thursday that donors to the government-funded program include foreign governments, individuals with close ties to the U.S. government and business leaders who oppose the government's anti-money-laundering efforts. Publicly-funded agencies such as the Treasury Department and the Department of Homeland Security then distribute the cash to local police, who partner with banks and legal services to launder the funds. The government program, called the Financial Action Task Force on Money Laundering, has contributed more than $500 million for drug-fighting efforts since its creation in 1999. The source of the government's funding was not made clear in the ProPublica and WNYC article. An administration official, however, said in an e-mail to the New York Times that the total "is higher than $500 million," but it "would be inaccurate to suggest it is sourced from localities." ProPublica and WNYC reported that similar programs in Canada and Mexico, both funded by the U.S. federal government, were largely funded through donations from nongovernmental organizations such as the Ford Foundation and corporate foundations. "To our knowledge, the task force has never received a dollar of federal funding," said ProPublica's Scott Shane. "It did, however, from 2002 until 2007, receive tens of millions of dollars in donations from a variety of foundations." ProPublica told WNYC and The Times that it had identified no active recipients of its investigation, but that it did receive information from "individuals in the U.S. and abroad" who said they had helped funnel money to police departments through the program. When money-laundering operations are revealed, critics say, the methods used to hide them should be revealed as well. Last year, ProPublica published "The Last Bracket," which traced a $50 million fundraising campaign by Chevron, a multibillion-dollar company, to police

What's New In?

Just a 10-second look from the surveyor of the Arctic Sea floor off the Russian coast shows how much more there is to find. Figures provided by Russian authorities show that the area has now been investigated by several survey teams, including one led by Russia's Federal Research Centre for Marine Biology and Oceanography (the institute that manages the Arctic and Antarctic Zones). Although there were concerns that the Arctic Seas had been surveyed too closely before, official figures show that there is actually more ice than before, and that it is older and thinner. The survey showed that ice was at a level of 3.5m, its highest level in over five years. Sea ice floes at the North Pole area in February, 2007 Photo: Reuters But the volume of ice is surprisingly lower than it was at this time in 2006. The figures are not final, as no new figures have been released yet. But they have added to a growing argument that Arctic sea ice is not as threatened by global warming as environmental campaigners had been suggesting. The US government's National Snow and Ice Data Centre recently announced that Arctic sea ice is the most-enclosed region of ice in the world, and that overall, Arctic sea ice is at its largest extent since satellite records began in 1979. There is also evidence that the Arctic sea ice is older and thinner than at any point in the satellite record, suggesting that it has already reacted to global warming, although the centre also said that any such changes would be mirrored by the Antarctic sea ice. Figures such as those provided by the Russian authorities will allow a far more detailed examination of the state of Arctic sea ice than was possible with the North Pole situation. The Russian figures show that the average minimum sea ice thickness was 4.35m, which is 0.7m higher than the 2006 figure. But the volume was 1.34m cubic kilometres, which is at least 4.5m cubic kilometres lower than in 2006. After a spell of unusually high temperatures in 2007, the area was investigated earlier this year by the two organisations, which work together under the Arctic Ocean Sea Ice and Climate Action Programme. Last month, the Russian survey was expanded to the area north of the Pole by the German Institut für Meteorologie und Geoenergie at the Leibniz Institute of Marine Sciences. Figures from the Russian survey were reported to the International Arctic Science Committee, an
