For more information on using Photoshop, see Chapter 2. * * * ## Blending Modes Photoshop uses a blending mode to create a result for any manipulation you perform. For example, you can use a blending mode to copy an image to create a different type of image, or to blend text onto an image. Figure 4-3 shows four different blending modes. Figure 4-3: Use these four options to blend the effects of the layers on top of each other. Blending modes are also useful if you want to blend two similar images in a single layer. For example, you can use a color overlay for the color of one image over another image, even with different colors. # Blending Modes Explained As you can see in Figure 4-3, the blending options for Photoshop are quite numerous, so it is important to know which blending mode is most appropriate to use. ## Alpha Blending Alpha blending blends the opacity of one layer onto another layer. It is most commonly used for creating transparency effects. ## Color Blending Color blending selects either the color or image of one layer over another, based on the color of the layer it is on. ## Hue/Saturation Blending Hue/saturation blending is a two-step process. The first step involves selecting or deselecting the image pixels that you wish to change, and the second step involves choosing a hue or saturation. When you select saturation, you can adjust the relative lightness and colorfulness of the image. ## Luminosity Blending Luminosity blending adjusts the relative lightness of the pixels of one layer to the pixels of the layer it is on top of. In Figure 4-3, the first example uses the differences between a color overlay and the blending mode of Color. The second is a combination of Selection and Overlay. The third is a color overlay, and the fourth is a luminosity overlay. * * *Color overlay: The color overlay blending mode matches the color of the layer above or below the current layer, as shown in Figure 4-3, right. * * *Selection and Overlay blending mode: The Selection and Overlay blending mode is similar to Color, in that it uses the layer above to change the appearance of the layer below, but it also uses the pixels of the layer below to change the appearance of the layer

What's New In Photoshop Download For Pc Windows 8?

Q: jQuery fadeOut and fadeIn not working I have a display that I want to fade out and fade in when a user hovers over a specific area. I've used jQuery before, but never with fadeIn and fadeOut and I'm having a hard time getting anything to happen. Here's my html: Sample heading This is a paragraph of sample text. jQuery: $('disp_main').hover(function() { $(this).fadeOut(1000); }, function() { $(this).fadeIn(1000); }); Thanks in advance. A: ;hover() works for elements that support an event called "hover", such as anchors () and links (). You cannot use it to trigger animations on elements without a user-interactive function, such as images (). Use.mouseover() instead.
