The Winter Meetings are over, but trades are still happening in the MLB. As the Rays, Mariners, Indians, White Sox, Twins, and Blue Jays continue to trade for young players. The Rays have agreed to a trade for Jake Odorizzi. They will send minor league righty Oswaldo Arcia to Tampa for a player to be named later. The 30-year-old Odorizzi had been struggling in 21 starts this year, so he'll get the chance to start in a contender. Arcia has had a rough year in his first full season. He's hitting a disappointing .252/.299/.345 with 8 home runs. He has an 88 OPS+ in the majors. When healthy, he is an asset to a lineup, stealing 36 bases this season. The Twins have agreed to a trade with the Indians. They will send righty Alex White to the Indians, in exchange for minor league RHP Adonis Medina. White is a 22-year-old who has pitched in both the rotation and in the bullpen this season. He has a 4.37 ERA in 66.2 innings with an 86/28 K/BB ratio. Medina was recently acquired by the Rockies, but just hours before he was sent to Cleveland. He's been a solid young arm this season, posting a 3.34 ERA in 104.2 innings with a 133/28 K/BB ratio. The Blue Jays have agreed to a trade with the Rangers for minor league righty Jack Sullivan. Toronto will send minor league righty Rowan Wick to Texas for Sullivan. The 25-year-old Wick has had a very solid season in Single-A ball so far. He's amassed a 3.01 ERA in 86 innings with a 104/15 K/BB ratio. Sullivan has also been very effective, pitching 33.2 innings and striking out 49 and walking 12. Related: Toronto Blue Jays Should Be Happy Draft Picks Include Six Top 100 Players The Indians have agreed to a trade with the Mariners for minor league pitchers Logan Allen and Phil Maton. Allen is a 29-year-old lefty who has a 4.21 ERA in 137 innings. He's struck out 156 and walked 49 batters. Maton is a 24-year-old righty who has a 3.54 ERA in 125.2 innings. He's struck

France is planning to ban assault weapons, according to a European Union official. The official called the move "logical" in the wake of a mass shooting that killed more than 100 people in Paris on Friday. In an interview with NBC News, a European Commission official, Bruno Le Roux, said: "I think this is very logical... with the terrorist incidents that have occurred in Europe, of course we need to be very careful. Now we have to review that rule." The ban, which has been proposed by French President Emmanuel Macron, would restrict the use of weapons such as assault rifles, semi-automatic pistols, and pump-action shotguns capable of holding more than 10 rounds of ammunition. In 2015, a man armed with a military-grade assault rifle killed a woman in a French town where police were holding a draw for a car. France — which has taken in more than 250,000 refugees and migrants since 2015 — has long prohibited weapons such as semi-automatic weapons that can quickly fire more than 10 rounds, and the new law would place restrictions on ammunition magazines. Earlier in the week, the French interior minister said he would push for a national security law that would also place more emphasis on database checks and other security measures. But on Saturday, French Justice Minister Christiane Taubira said that she had had no talks with the French government about the proposed ban on weapons, and could not confirm the existence of such a proposal. French Interior Minister Gérard Collomb said he was committed to further security reforms and to the emergence of a new national security law. "We know that the authorities will have to increase their means so that they can counter terrorism without it becoming in any way a pretext for more restrictive measures which could be violating rights," he told reporters. On Friday, following a series of deadly attacks over the past few years, the French government stepped up security measures at its borders as well as at checkpoints for non-nationals trying to enter France. When asked about the possibility of a ban on weapons, Le Roux said he didn't want to "specify what would be the consequences in case there's a major terrorist incident." In the wake of Friday's attack, French authorities arrested 25 people in southern France who were suspected of being involved in the massacre in Paris, according to two French officials. A source close to the investigation said the suspects did not come from Syria or Iraq.
